The Solution

Most open admission shelters have to euthanize about 75% of their animals – this stat is lower for dogs but higher for cats. No kill shelters have considerably lower kill rates - but what happens is that the euthanizing is being “downloaded” to area pounds. When no-kill shelters are full, unwanted animals have to go somewhere. But this could change. The City Council of Greater Sudbury has the ability to almost eliminate the euthanizing of unwanted and abandoned cats and dogs – simply by backing the establishment of a $50 spay neuter clinic, as spay/neuter costs have since risen dramatically. Thus ... well, you get the picture. We know what doesn't work. This is the current system of controlling the companion animal population by euthanizing. It's miserable for everyone involved. What does work is A SPAY/NEUTER CLINIC. In fact, it's the only thing that DOES work.
